

CLIMATE JUSTICE

Can fairness create a green future?

Saturday 11 November | 14:30–18:00

Minghella Studios, Whiteknights campus, University of Reading

Climate change is already affecting people across the world, and is likely to get worse. But is it fair when droughts, floods, and ruined harvests hit communities that had no role in making the problem in the first place?

Come to the University of Reading to meet researchers from the Leverhulme Climate Justice Programme, who will introduce you to some of the biggest ethical and political questions raised by climate change, and humanity's responses to it.

You'll take home an understanding of climate justice and new knowledge about this global problem. Join us as we ask: will thinking about justice when we respond to climate change help us to create a green future for everyone?

- HEAR short, entertaining presentations and view an exhibition of thought-provoking posters
- EXPLORE fair ways to deal with climate refugees, and govern attempts to control the weather
- THINK about where the money should come from, and how political decisions can be made fairly

Then join us at a screening of the documentary film Greedy Lying Bastards, which investigates fossil fuel industries and how they affect vulnerable communities, shown in the Minghella Studios cinema.

Attendance is FREE, and we'll provide drinks and snacks to fuel the learning and discussions!

TO REGISTER

Visit rdg.ac/climatejustice2017

Organised by the University of Reading as part of the ESRC Festival of Social Science

